Bing Chen, Chief Executive Officer of Atlas, commented, "Although this is Atlas' first distribution of common and preferred share dividends, it is the 59th consecutive dividend paid by Seaspan. Our resilient business models, which are built on long-term contracted revenues, predictable cash flows and integrated partnerships with our customers, are a testament to our financial strength and operational stability. Our recent acquisition of APR further strengthens our business models' resilience and positions us to continue capturing attractive opportunities arising from the current turbulent market. Despite this unprecedented market environment, we remain fully on track and laser focused on maximizing long-term shareholder value through our proven commitment to disciplined capital allocation such as dividend distributions."

Ryan Courson, Chief Financial Officer of Atlas, commented, "Today's dividend announcement is evidence of Atlas' continued disciplined capital allocation. Our strong balance sheet and credit profile allow the group to maintain robust liquidity and broad access to the global capital markets, as demonstrated by our recently announced 10-year, flexible financing program for the acquisition of four high quality vessels backed by long-term charters. Atlas' scale, diversified portfolio and financial strength enable us to focus on our strategic priorities, creating sustainable value for shareholders across economic cycles."
